Too young to tan?

Chicago Tribune

Tanning beds in Chicago salons soon will be off-limits to people younger than 18.

The City Council on Wednesday overwhelmingly voted in favor of the tanning bed ban in a move the sponsoring alderman said is aimed at protecting children from cancer.

Ald. Debra Silverstein (50th) invited two women she said contracted skin cancer from tanning facilities to stand in council chambers before the vote.

"These are just two of the many people who suffer from cancer caused by the terrible effects of tanning beds," Silverstein said.

Three aldermen—Anthony Beale (9th), Roberto Maldonado (26th) and Brendan Reilly (42nd)—voted against the stricter rules.

"Right now there is a requirement of parental consent, and I think that's OK for me as a parent," Maldonado said.

State law bans those younger than 14 from using tanning beds at salons. Mayor Emanuel said it was appropriate to give parents additional help.

"We have restrictions as it relates to teenagers on smoking. This ordinance on tanning reflects a strategy as it relates to protecting our teenagers, as they have to make decisions," Emanuel said after the meeting.

Sorry, kids—Chicago bans minors from using salon tanning beds

The ban does not prevent minors from getting spray tans or using other tanning products or equipment that do not irradiate the skin. A tanning facility that allows someone younger than 18 to use banned equipment will face a fine of $100 to $250. It will fall to the city Department of Public Health to enforce the ban, which will take effect in the next few weeks.

A BUSY BODY

Here are some of the other moves made Wednesday by the City Council. TRIBUNE

More street food

Vendors will be able to sell whole fruits and vegetables from movable outdoor stands under an amended ordinance unanimously approved. An unlimited number of produce merchant licenses will be available to operate on private property and in 30 designated locations on the public way.

Landmark decision

The council approved official landmark status for the Wrigley Building, granting protection to a treasured civic icon as new owners prepare to renovate it.

Hotel for Hyde Park

Aldermen approved up to $5.2 million in subsidies for a 131-room hotel in Hyde Park. The $28.6 million project at the northeast corner of Harper Avenue and East 52nd Place will be developed by Smart Hotels LLC and The Olympia Companies.

War protest settlement

The council approved paying more than $12 million to settle two wrongful arrest lawsuits stemming from the Chicago Police Department's handling of a March 2003 anti-Iraq War march.

Fire building safety

Mayor Emanuel and Ald. Debra Silverstein (50th) introduced a proposal to allow the Chicago Fire Department to affix placards to unsafe abandoned buildings so firefighters are aware they could face dangerous conditions when they battle blazes in the structures.

Don't let Google spoil your dates

Niki Fritz

redeye@tribune.com

If you Google my name, you will not see a list of articles I wrote for my college newspaper, my name on the high school honor roll or even my LinkedIn page. If you Google "Niki Fritz," you will get listings for Nikki Fritz, a surgically altered, B-list '90s porn actress.

And, yes, I actually have had to tell people, "No, sorry, that is not me in the 'Nikki Fritz Making Love So Hard' video."

That is the thing about Google. It leaves you with more questions instead of the concrete answers you were searching for—and it's especially dangerous when you're dating.

At best, Googling a potential love connection will get you a peek at a shallow, grainy version of your date through a blocked Facebook account. At worst, you will end up thinking he or she is a porn star.

And once you have gone down that rabbit hole of search engine madness, you can't come back. It never stops just with Google. That's merely the gateway URL that leads to full-blown stalking.

Soon you are absorbed in all the other facets of the social networking world, looking at 6-year-old pictures from college on your date's oh-so-stalkable timeline, browsing through 10 years of educational and vocational history on LinkedIn and clicking through starred tracks on Spotify.

Eventually you start to judge. You are appalled by his "Call Me Maybe" selection on Spotify, or her entire album of sepia-colored cat photos on Instagram or maybe a two-year stint as a clown on his resume. Your date morphs from a potentially awesome person into a collage of random digitized facts.

Of course, none of us looks great in the unforgiving, pixelated light of Google. We all have a permmed hair phase in our past or a love of really bad pop music or an obsession with owl statues. But all these things also come with a story—a story you will never know if you don't ask.

Which makes me wonder: Why don't we just ask people questions instead of trying to get to know them through the ether? Honestly, I don't think it is because we are a generation lost to the Internet. I think it is because we are a generation looking for a sure thing, a 100 percent guarantee, Google proof that our dates are "the ones"—or at least not the crazy ones.

But Google won't tell you this. Google won't say, "This guy is hung up on his ex, is still supported by his parents and secretly hopes one day to 'make it' as a puppeteer." It won't tell you, "This girl has commitment issues, a Hello Kitty tramp stamp and $20,000 in debt."

Google can't tell you if your date is a mistake. Google can't tell you if he will retell different versions of the same Chris Rock joke all through dessert, or if she will preface every expression with "totes" or if he will break your heart.

Only time and possibly a few cracked hearts can help you find the good ones.

TUMBLR THURSDAY

FIVE TO TRY

It's Thursday! What else do you have to do besides procrastinate and look forward to the weekend? I'd like to help you with that. Here are five Tumblr pages you should be following for the foreseeable future. —JESSICA GALLIART, REDEYE SOCIAL MEDIA LADY

Depressed Copywriter

depressedcopywriter.com

The tagline, "Living in disappointment," says it all. If you're a copywriter by trade or just have a penchant for quips, you'll appreciate this Tumblr's emo take on headlines, titles and more spotted in magazines and elsewhere.

Citation Needed

citationneeded.tumblr.com

The editors behind this Tumblr sift through the millions of articles on Wikipedia for the most bizarre passages about pop culture subjects. Example, from a passage about John Mayer's "Your Body is a Wonderland" song: "Mayer once said during his 'A/Is' tour, that the song was about 'girly parts,' but this was later denied."

Dear Coquette

dearcoquette.com

Need advice? With a little attitude? You'll get it. Nobody knows who is behind this Tumblr, but her answers to submitted questions—which she describes as "shady advice from a raging [bleep]"—will make you giggle (and nod approvingly).

RedEye Sports

redeyesportsguy.tumblr.com

I will call this a shameless plug, because I have zero shame about telling you to follow the Tumblr run by RedEye's sports desk. You want videos of on-field injuries? Vintage Chicago sports photos? You'll get 'em.

Have a suggestion for a Tumblr to check out? I love discovering new ones, especially those that are Chicago-focused. Tweet me at @jessicagalliard!

CHICAGO HOMICIDE REPORT

BAD TO WORSE?

WITH SUMMER LOOMING, KILLINGS ALREADY HIGH

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Summer came early to Chicago—or rather, the high violence numbers that typically occur during the summer arrived early this year. Homicides are up 44 percent from January through May compared with the same period last year, based on a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data.

Chicago recorded 208 homicides in the first five months of the year, versus the 144 homicides the city logged during the same time last year, RedEye data found. Shooting fatalities were up nearly 47 percent while homicides by stabbing nearly doubled compared with last year.

The homicides took the greatest toll on victims in their 20s—56 of the victims from January through May last year were in their 20s while 103 victims were in their 20s during the same period this year.

As typically is the case, the South and West sides saw the most homicides. Woodlawn on the South Side was hit particularly hard.

The community area, which runs from King Drive to Lake Michigan and from 60th to 67th streets, logged 12 homicides in the first five months of the year, compared with five during the same time last year.

Many of the homicides occurred in the western part of the community, west of the Cottage Grove stop on the East 63rd branch on the Green Line.

"Based on the intelligence information we have, we have seen a larger number of gangs being developed and organized," said Ald. Willie Cochran, whose 20th Ward includes Woodlawn. "I will not let my community continue to go through this. ... We are going to take hard lines on every aspect that we think is contributing to this, from bad landlords to bad character."

One plan under consideration for that area is additional manpower from CeaseFire, an anti-violence group based on the Near West Side that focuses on preventing conflicts from escalating. Last month, Mayor Emanuel announced the Police Department would work with CeaseFire, which said it has been promised $1.5 million in city funding—the first time the group has received money from the city.

CeaseFire Illinois Director Tio Hardiman said he plans to use the money to target three police districts that serve the areas of Woodlawn, Roseland and North Lawndale (which saw 12 homicides in the first five months of the year compared with two during the same time last year).

Hardiman said he would like to hire 15 to 20 workers for Woodlawn, which currently has two violence interrupters who patrol the streets and attempt to stop arguments. Meanwhile, Chicago police say they are honing their anti-violence strategy by improving their intelligence on gangs and guns used in multiple crimes.

If winter and spring are any indication, Chicago may face a violent summer. Fifty homicides were recorded in both March and May this year, according to RedEye data. Summer typically is the only time Chicago sees months with that high of a tally. Last year, only one month logged 50 or more homicides: July, which recorded 55 homicides, RedEye data shows.

"I think we can at least break even this year [compared to last year], but it's going to be hard," Hardiman said.

BY THE NUMBERS

There were 208 homicides from January through May this year, a 44 percent increase compared with the 144 homicides during the same period last year. RedEye looks at where, when and how these homicides occurred in the first five months of the year versus the same period last year.

Stun gun used after parking violation escalated, police say

Chicago Tribune

Tiffany Rent stood hunched over in pain outside a Far South Side courthouse Wednesday, tears streaming down her face as she worried about whether her unborn son had been harmed when a Chicago police officer shocked her with a stun gun the previous night.

Rent, who is eight months pregnant, said the officer knew she was expecting and accused him of overreacting during a dispute that began over a parking violation.

"I didn't hit anybody," Rent said. "I didn't do anything."

But police say Rent, 30, swore at the officer and tried to take off in her SUV when he said he was going to arrest her.

“I didn't hit anybody, I didn't do anything.” —Tiffany Rent

The incident occurred late Tuesday when Rent parked in a handicapped spot at a Walgreens in the 10300 block of South Michigan Avenue while her fiance, Joseph Hobbs, went inside to buy a battery for his car's key chain remote, police and Hobbs said.

A police officer wrote a parking ticket, but Rent tore it up and threw it at him, according to a police report. The officer got out of his car to write her a ticket for littering and asked her for identification, the report said.

"I ain't giving you [bleep]," the report quoted Rent as saying.

As Rent got back into her SUV, the officer warned that he would use his stun gun if she drove away. When Rent "put her right hand on the gear shifter in an attempt to put the car in gear and leave the scene," the officer fired the weapon, the police report said.

Hobbs, the father of Rent's unborn son, was arrested when he tried to intervene, police said. He said he suffered a dislocated elbow during the arrest.

Rent was released after treatment at two separate hospitals. She and Hobbs were charged with misdemeanor offenses.

Police Superintendent Garry McCarthy declined to discuss details of the incident but said police generally are authorized to use a Taser to prevent an escape or overcome an assault. The Independent Police Review Authority is investigating.

Weekend tip: Stay off Fullerton

Chicago Tribune

The move of patients from Children's Memorial Hospital in Lincoln Park to the new Ann and Robert H. Lurie Children's Hospital in Streeterville will mean road closures for much of Saturday, the city announced Wednesday.

Fullerton Avenue will be closed from Lincoln Avenue to Lake Shore Drive from 4 a.m. Saturday until the last patient is taken to the new hospital at 225 E. Chicago Ave., which could take from 10 to 18 hours, according to city officials.

Exit and entrance ramps at Fullerton and Lake Shore Drive also will be closed during this time.

The new 23-story building, which makes Lurie Children's Hospital the tallest children's hospital in the country, is located on the Northwestern campus and is physically connected to Prentice Women's Hospital.

And don't forget ...

The Near West Side on Saturday recorded its seventh homicide of the year, a RedEye analysis of preliminary police data found. A 26-year-old man was shot to death in the 1300 block of West Washburne Avenue, police said.

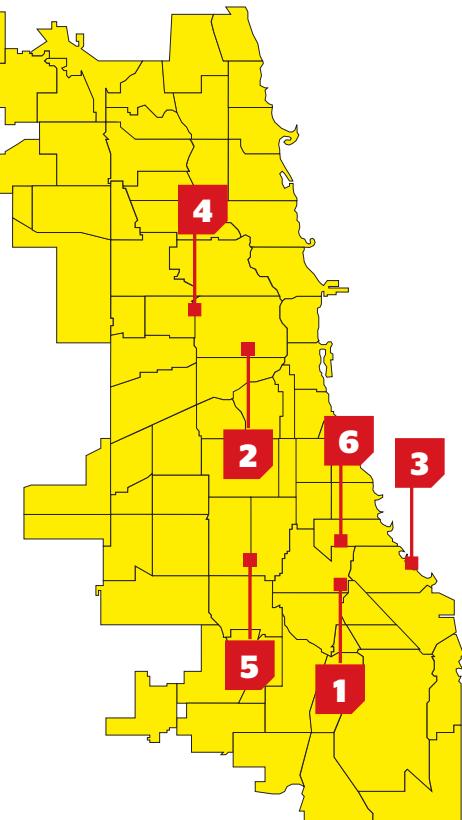

The community area, which includes the West Loop, University Village and the Illinois Medical District, recorded nine homicides in 2011, RedEye data shows.

Citywide, gunshot homicides were logged in the past week in Austin, Chicago Lawn, Greater Grand Crossing, Morgan Park and South Shore, according to RedEye data.

May ended last week with 50 homicides, up from 39 homicides logged in May 2011, according to RedEye data.

Law would target gangs, not individuals

Chicago Tribune

An anti-racketeering bill awaiting the governor's signature would enable local authorities to go after street gangs as criminal enterprises and not just prosecute lower-level gang members, Cook County State's Attorney Anita Alvarez said Wednesday.

The Street Gang RICO Act, which passed out of the Legislature last month, would allow police and prosecutors to "fight the disease" of street gangs, not just their symptoms, Alvarez said in a news conference at the downtown county administration building.

Under current state law, prosecutors have to treat gang crimes as isolated events, essentially attacking the problem one crime at a time, Alvarez said. The gang leaders know this, she said, and underlings simply are replaced when they are arrested and put in prison.

Chicago Police Supt. Garry McCarthy said Chicago has at least 69 street gangs. Police have identified more than 600 factions within those gangs, with new rivalries and disputes between the factions occurring all the time, he said.

"It's difficult to watch gang member after gang member, mostly young minority men, convicted and put in prison again and again, while the leaders of these gangs continue to escape arrest and prosecution," Alvarez said.

KING of VILLAINS

By Chris Sosa | REDEYE

In LeBron James' quest for redemption, he could miss out on a major opportunity. He told ESPN in December that he was through being the villain whom so many people (read: fans on sports radio and in the Twittersphere) think he is.

It's too bad, because he could be the greatest über-nemesis the NBA has ever known. Not the Pistons-of-the-'80s, commit-felony-assault-on-the-court-and-act-like-crybabies kind of bad guy; I'm thinking more in the WWE, he's-playing-to-the-crowd-and-deep-down-we-know-he's-misunderstood sense.

James already possesses several qualities of a compelling antagonist:

CHSOSA@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYESPORTSCHI

Troubled background

James wasn't always a "heel." He once was an underdog, having been tasked to single-handedly lift a bereft Cleveland squad from the depths of NBA misery. It's enough to make even the strongest man crack, so it's hard to fault him for taking the "easy way out" in opting to play with Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh.

Distinctive threads

What says "Darth Vader chic" better than the Heat's black uniforms? All he needs is a sweet cape. Off the court James is going for the Clark Kent look with the thick-rimmed, non-prescription glasses he wears at news conferences, but they can't hide the brooding hoops genius behind those frames.

Formidable powers

As with any story worth following, suspense is created when the bad guy temporarily seizes the upper hand. The further James takes his teams in the playoffs, the more relieved the "good guys" are when the scourge is finally vanquished. Would the average NBA fan embrace a Celtics-Pacers matchup this readily? I think not.

Resilience

Like any memorable villain, James' greatness means he'll rise up each spring and steal the spotlight for as long as he can. Every. Single. Year.

Chris Bosh could start Game 6

South Florida Sun-Sentinel

Miami Heat coach Erik Spoelstra still is debating whether to start forward Chris Bosh on Thursday against the Boston Celtics in Game 6 of the Eastern Conference Finals.

Bosh returned to the lineup for the first time in Tuesday's Game 5, scoring nine points and grabbing seven rebounds.

He had missed the previous nine postseason games because of a strained lower abdominal muscle.

"I'm still going through that thought process," Spoelstra said. "I think he'll be able to handle to a bigger load of minutes and it will be based on how he feels throughout the game."

Bosh said he is comfortable returning to his starting role or coming off the bench. He referred to himself as 99 percent healthy, saying he was fortunate to get one game under his belt before facing an elimination situation.

The Celtics hold a 3-2 lead in the best-of-seven series.

"I just want to play," Bosh said. "It doesn't matter to me. I think we feel confident in whoever we put out there. We're good enough to get the job done."

Heat-Celtics a hit

ESPN's telecast of Sunday's Game 4 of the Eastern Conference Finals between Miami and Boston was the highest-rated NBA game ever on the sports network. The broadcast drew an audience of 11.07 million viewers, an ESPN record, though it remained below the cable TV record of 11.11 million viewers set by TNT's Heat-Chicago Bulls Eastern Conference Finals Game 1 last year. 1 Bears training camp opens July 26. How are you counting down?	I'm using Roman numerals. Super Bowl XLVII or bust!	Sheep wearing helmets and shoulder pads. Think I just came up with an idea for a new league.	Saving my loose change each day for Matt Forte.	By wrapping Cutler in bubble wrap until then.	Integers.
2 What's the logic behind reducing Devin Hester's role in kick returns?	Because he's been oh-so effective catching passes. (Please tell me your sarcasm detector is on.)	Once you become a legend, there's nowhere to go but down?	Get ready for the Marshall-Hester show.	I've given up trying to use "Bears" and "logic" in the same sentence.	Ignorance Is Strength. War Is Peace. Less Touches Is More Touches.
3 Why does Cubs first-round pick Albert Almora want more money than draft rules dictate?	How else is he going to afford to hang out with Patrick Kane?	Besides for that baby who messes with Jimmy Fallon, everyone wants more money.	Did you say Albert or his agent Scott Boras .. let's be real.	It's compensation for the fact that he'll be on the Cubs.	Because draft rules don't apply when you're drafted by a AAA team.
4 Terrell Owens needs a new agent. Whom should it be?	Rahm Emanuel. If he ever brings a Super Bowl here, he'll prove his powers have no limits.	Someone aggressive, arrogant and delusional. He can represent himself.	Skip Bayless.	The mothers of his children, so they can get paid again.	If he insists on paying someone to not get him camp invites, may as well be me.
5 How'd you celebrate the return of Chris Bosh to the Miami lineup Tuesday night?	Just like he did: by sitting on a bench and doing nothing.	The opposite of how I celebrated the end of the game. One more, Rondo. You can do it.	Puffy painting a homemade Garnett jersey. Please tell me you remember puffy paint?!	By chuckling as the Celtics won anyway.	Does watching "Doctor Who" on Netflix count as celebrating?

The new Fridge?

The Bears have been known to deploy a defensive tackle at fullback in short-yardage or goal-line situations, and it could happen again this year.

In the mid-1980s, 6-foot-2, 335-pound William "Refrigerator" Perry made national headlines when he got the call on occasion to plow into the end zone or even catch a TD pass. This year, the Bears might call on 6-3, 295-pound defensive tackle Henry Melton to score from in close.

"I have some experience playing running back. [They're] trying to bring me back, play some fullback a little bit," Melton said after the Bears' OTA session Wednesday at Halas Hall.

Melton did more than dabble in the backfield in high school. As a senior at Grapevine High School in Texas, Melton rushed for more than 800 yards and eight touchdowns. He also scored 12 touchdowns rushing as a junior while averaging 6.2 yards a carry.

At Texas, Melton was a backup running back for two years and carried 132 times for 625 yards (4.7-yard average) and 16 touchdowns.

"I played a little bit," Melton said. "Trying to bring it back, see what I've got left. It's fun. I'm trying to perfect my craft as defensive tackle. But it's a fun switch-up. Any way I can help."

"We'll see how it goes. I've got to go the right way first. We'll get a hold of that. Hopefully you might see me a little bit on offense ... you might see me out there a little bit."

Danica featured in Sega game

CANNED HEAT

CRAFT BREWS SHIFT TO CANS IN TIME FOR SUMMER SIPPING

By Emily Van Zandt

REDEYE

It's not easy being a glass bottle in the summertime.

Not welcome in ballparks or poolside, dangerous on hikes and at rec leagues, maligned on deck and docks, bottled beer can be a setback during warm-weather adventures.

For fans of craft brews, no-glass-allowed policies may seem a swigging setback.

But a growing number of Chicago-area craft brewers are working to keep their beers summer-friendly by churning them out in an easily toted, crushable and recyclable form: cans.

"Part of the reason [we released a canned beer] was selfishness," said Jason Ebel, co-founder of Two Brothers Brewing Co. in west-suburban Warrenville. "I love to be outside and I wanted a package that was portable."

In early May, Two Brothers released Outlaw

IPA as its first canned offering. The brew has a remarkably smooth, fruity kick for an IPA, and you'll find it only in bold red-and-black 12-ounce cans, sold in six packs.

"We already have a following in bottles for our other beers, so we thought it would be a really good opportunity to put something totally unique out there. ... Let's put something out that's never been released and only put it in the cans," Ebel said.

While the canned craft trend has been bubbling locally for a while now—Half Acre's tallboys have been a shelf staple since 2010—it got a big boost in March when heavy hitter Goose Island jumped into the game, canning its super-popular 312 wheat ale. Now that summer has arrived, Goose Island spokesman Mark Mahoney expects cans of 312 to pop up at all kinds of outdoor events.

"312 is for active lifestyle folks. ... People have it at music concerts, sailing, at the beach, grilling out—most of these places aren't bottle-friendly," Mahoney said. "[Going into summer], we have significantly increased production of the cans of 312."

Cans are a standard offering for most mass-market beer brands, so it may seem strange that craft breweries don't always opt for the container. But the can is divisive in the beer world, with some drinkers complaining of a metallic or "tinny" taste and others praising the method for keeping beer fresher than a bottle.

"Cans have less head space and no light gets through so [the beer] stays fresher longer. ... Essentially, it's like a mini-keg in terms of freshness," Ebel said. "Generally speaking, they're superior to bottles."

And about that metallic bite?

"There is definitely a stigma," said Charlie Davis, marketing director and one of the brewers at Finch's Beer Co., which sells 16-ounce cans of its Golden Wing blond ale, Threadless IPA and Cut Throat pale ale. "My advice would be to pour it into a glass. It's great from the can, but if you're sensitive to the can, it's always better enjoyed from a clean glass."

Finch's has been canning since August 2011 and released their Threadless IPA—a collaboration with the local T-shirt company—just last month.

Lighter-bodied brews such as pale and golden ales are more readily found in cans for the summer season than heavier stouts and porters, and that isn't a coincidence.

"Former [Goose Island] brewmaster Greg Hall was huge into biking," Mahoney said of 312's origin. "He said, 'I don't want to be drinking a real thick, heavy beer on a hot summer day.' 312 is a very easy drinking beer. If you're parched, you can have a few."

THREE TO TRY*Sierra Nevada Pale Ale

A golden orange beer with a bready, spicy aroma. The beer has floral, spicy and citrus notes that meld with a malty backbone.

Stone Pale Ale

A copper-hued beer with a bready, caramel-like nose. The beer is crisp, with hints of grapefruit rind and caramel.

Half Acre Daisy Cutter

Unfiltered, the orange-hued beer is hazy, with a nose that brings to mind citrus rind and pine trees. The taste is raw, yet delicious, with aggressive citrus notes that balance against a biscuit-like body.

Summer sippers

Chicago Tribune

There's something quintessentially American about American pale ales. They're descendants of the British pale ale, a relatively understated style that is balanced and dry with distinct earthy hops that lend the beer a bitter note. But given an American spin, with American ingredients, most notably a healthy dose of West Coast hops, American pale ale's flavors are louder and more aggressive with pronounced piney, citrusy or spicy notes.

Sierra Nevada founder Ken Grossman defined the style in 1980 when he first brewed the golden orange Sierra Nevada Pale Ale with its distinct bready, spicy, citrusy notes. Ever since the style has practically defined American craft beer, as nearly every brewery that has since opened up has tried to put its own stamp on the style.

The style's bright West Coast hop varieties like Cascade with its spicy, citruslike notes have an uncanny ability to draw people in.

Their lure surprised even Half Acre, which first brewed its hop-forward Daisy Cutter pale ale in 2009 as a one-off limited release.

"It was an experiment," says Gabriel Magliaro, the brewery's president. "We were trying to figure out what we'd be as a brewery, what type of beers we'd produce."

But the hazy orange beer, with its raw, orange, lemon and pine notes quickly attracted a following. The brewery made it a seasonal release, then soon after, a staple. Quickly it became the brewery's best-selling beer. "It evolved organically," says Magliaro. "We just brewed the beer and people responded to it."

Half Acre isn't alone. Despite their bold hoppy notes, American pale ales are remarkably refreshing. With a relatively low alcohol content—generally somewhere between 4.5 and 5.5 percent by volume—medium body and crisp, bitter finish, they're ideal for sipping on a warm summer afternoon, which helps explain their popularity.

'Top Chef' fave to open Chicago restaurant

By Lisa Arnett

REDEYE

The owners of local hangouts Public House and Bull & Bear are teaming up with "Top Chef" fan favorite Fabio Viviani to open a new restaurant in River North slated for a late 2012 or early 2013 debut.

The Florence-born Viviani was known for his Italian cooking on the fifth season of "Top Chef," and he also returned to the show as part of the cast of "Top Chef All Stars." Luke Stoioff, who owns Public House and Bull & Bear with business partner David Rekhson, calls the concept "Italian-ish."

Though they're not disclosing details yet, Stoioff said he and Rekhson met Viviani at Public House last winter during a trip to Chicago, and through his repeat visits, they became friends. "He's kind of like an Italian version of David and I, so we get along really well," Stoioff said.

Stoioff said he and Rekhson have had an Italian concept in mind for more than a year and ended up talking to Viviani about it.

"I said, 'We're working on an Italian concept, could we pick your brain?' And then from picking the brain we went to chatting every week to twice a week to [a point] where I'm talking to him every day, and I was like, 'Why don't we team up on this?'"

David Blonsky, corporate chef for Bull & Bear and Public House, also will be involved. "Fabio's writing the menu, Blonsky's assisting and securing ingredients and local vendors and David and I are designing the restaurant, the concept and doing all the rest of the stuff, basically," Stoioff said. "It's a really good team; it's kind of like Marvel Avengers. We're all joining forces to create ... our take on what we wanted to do."

More details will be released later this year.

"We're going to Italy in August to do some research and get some inspiration for the name and everything," Stoioff said.

ALBUM REVIEW

GARAGE HYMNS

Garage Hymns

variety of songs Empires performed well and showed promise that these locals would not be just locals for long.

Good thing band the members don't seem like guys who believe in breaking promises. In the wake of tour dates with the Temper Trap and the Kaiser Chiefs and with a slot at Lollapalooza in August, Empires drops the focused, consistent "Garage Hymns" on Tuesday. The band may not have an identity outside of "solid rock band," but that's enough at a time when there aren't many bands who can throw clean strikes down the middle.

The explosive "Hell's Heroes," unveiled when Empires landed in the final four in Rolling Stone's competition to land an unsigned band on its cover, demands a big venue from which to soar. The driving "Hard Times" and dirty sneer of "Surrenderer" compel even when impassioned singer Sean Van Vleet's words ("You got me where you want me, come and get me come on") fail to stick.

"Keep It Steady" hews too close to the superior Gaslight Anthem, while single "We Lost Magic" threatens to move earnestness into corny territory. Still, there's something refreshing about a band that boasts conviction where others have only attitude, and create anthems (like "Night is Young") through quality songwriting, not just an annoying chorus that won't go away.

“ To have eight Vevo Certified videos means the world ... I always say the Internet is where I got my start. I posted videos and now to have it come full circle—and now I'm getting CERTIFIED—it's amazing.”

—Justin Bieber

Vevo pats popular video artists on back

Reuters

Video hosting site Vevo has created a new seal of approval to reward music artists whose videos cross the 100 million views milestone and will kick off the program with YouTube star Justin Bieber.

Vevo expects its new “Certified” program, unveiled Wednesday with plans to launch Tuesday, will become a popular measure of success like a Billboard chart position or the Recording Industry Association of America’s designations of silver, gold or platinum record sales.

Currently only 32 music makers, led by Bieber, Katy Perry, Rihanna and Lady Gaga, have been certified as passing the 100 million view milestone, Vevo said.

The certification tracks video view counts across digital platforms including YouTube, mobile and tablet devices and sites including Facebook, AOL and Yahoo! Music.

“It's a very notable achievement of success and dedication from the fans ... people are moving away from buying music and accessing it online, and we wanted to recognize the people connecting to music online,” said Fred Santarpia, general manager of Vevo.

Vevo will incorporate a small badge next to videos that hit the milestone, and a selected artist will be given a two-week spotlight on the site, featuring exclusive content for fans. Interviews with artists, behind-the-scenes video production footage and an opportunity for fans to meet their idols and present them Vevo certificates in person, with video posted online, are examples of some of the exclusive features.

“The content is a ‘thank you’ to the fans ... Vevo has done a great job of providing inside access into the world of the artist, bringing fans in touch with their idol, and this will be a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity for fans,” Santarpia said.

The “Certified” program will kick off with Bieber, who rose to fame through YouTube after videos of him singing as a child were posted on the site and spotted by a music agent when he was in his early teens.

Now 18, Bieber commands a loyal online following with 22 million Twitter “beliebers” and 43 million Facebook fans. He has amassed more than 2.5 billion views on his Vevo channel, led by his single “Baby,” which has 745 million hits alone.

“To have eight Vevo Certified videos means the world ... I always say the Internet is where I got my start. I posted videos and now to have it come full circle—and now I'm getting CERTIFIED—it's amazing,” Bieber said in a statement.

Singers Perry, LMFAO and Selena Gomez will be “Certified” throughout June and July, with all exclusive content viewable on vevo.com/certified and across Vevo digital platforms.

Summer internships often mean long hours and tedious assignments for little or no pay. But just because you're low on the totem pole doesn't mean it's OK to assume nobody cares how you look.

As many work environments—and young people's tastes—get more casual, answering the question of what to wear for that summer job can be a tricky task.

"I always tell my assistants, 'Dress for the job you want, not the job you have,'" said Regina Gardiner, senior accessories editor for the magazine People StyleWatch. "You think people aren't looking at you, but when entry level jobs open up, you never know" if you might be considered.

Dress in an inappropriate way, however, and your name could be left off the potential hire lists.

We asked style experts, workplace managers and former interns about what tips they can offer—and in some cases, what they learned the hard way.

» Before your first day, find out as much as you can about the company's style culture. If you go for an interview, take mental notes about how people dress. If you're not sure, err on the side of going too formal on the first day.

» Consider investing in a few basics. Gardiner recommends four basic wardrobe staples for women that can be dressed up or down for practically any workplace and found at practically any price point: A shift or A-line dress with plenty of coverage in a neutral color, a cardigan or blazer, a great pair of pumps, and a handbag roomy enough to carry a change of shoes or an umbrella.

Sheon Wilson, the Durham, N.C.-based stylist behind "Refresh Your Style," gives this list for men: A sports coat in a lighter neutral, a suit in charcoal or navy, a lace-up shoe or Oxford, and a button-up or dress shirt in white or cream. If you don't go too trendy with these staples, you'll get plenty of use out of them even when the summer is over.

» Sweat the small stuff. If you think nobody notices your bra straps, mismatched socks or that nasty old belt, think again.

» If someone in a position of authority pulls you aside to talk fashion, listen.

» The company cookout is not a frat party. Pay attention to what you wear to company social events outside the office. Golf shirts, nice shorts or appropriate summer dresses are most in order.

» Consider those tattoos, piercings and hair colors. In extremely creative workplaces, displaying tattoos, Technicolor hair or multiple piercings might be fine. "But 80 to 90 percent of the time, it's not looked upon to have any of that," Gardiner said.

Think about removing piercings and covering tattoos that could be distracting. And this might not be the time to try out the latest pink hair color. In the end, you want supervisors to focus on your work, not be distracted by your appearance.

Find a print you like

On racks, you'll find everything from polka dots to florals to tie-dyes, and most of them are extremely colorful. For the truly bold, there are tie-dyes with florals over them and entire tropical scenes printed across jeans or tees.

Try it with a simple top

It's safest and easiest to pair a pattern with a solid rather than wearing print on print. Dabble with printed denim paired with a plain top.

Go for it

The key is to experiment, because sometimes you have to see how different items look together before you wear them out. Try pairing a polka dot top and floral jeans; they work because the oranges in each create outfit harmony.

NEW FLOWER POWER

There's no better way to celebrate gorgeous weather than with a super-fresh printed piece. You can wear it head to toe or mix it up with other designs. To find out how to wear bold and colorful patterns, we asked Amber Toste of Houndstooth boutique in Savage, Minn.

"There are more crazy things out there than I've ever seen," she said.

Here's how to integrate them into your wardrobe.

Once the court of public opinion stamps a movie as a classic, watch out. It becomes precious cargo, and attempts to deride or change that valuable commodity may endure the wrath of 1,000 suns. Or just emails from die-hard fans who say you don't know what you're talking about.

That's the long way of saying that "Prometheus," director Ridley Scott's highly anticipated "Alien" prequel opening Friday (which I liked very much), already has received handfuls of negative-to-partly-negative reviews complaining that the new movie's either too much like its predecessor or not like it enough. Naturally, a movie that works to fit into the universe of a beloved sci-fi/horror franchise—well, the entire franchise and its many sequels and spinoffs isn't so beloved, but the first movie and James Cameron's sequel,

Michael Fassbender stars as David in 'Prometheus'

"Aliens," sure are—will and should hearken to the source material, without becoming redundant.

"Prometheus" is not redundant. Without giving anything away, I can say that much of "Prometheus" takes place off of the spaceship, replacing the claustrophobic tension of "Alien" with a looser sense of exploration that, of course, transitions into fear. Many have noted that "Prometheus" isn't as scary, and it's not. It's also not trying to be. The thriller's far more interested in steadily examining our natural curiosities and desire to meet our maker than infiltrating our nightmares.

It would have been foolish for "Prometheus" to attempt the same streamlined horror of "Alien," a movie that terrified in 1979 and influenced countless other copycats that now strive and fail to scare. When's the last time a horror/sci-fi movie came along that felt fresh and freaked you out? It's hard to do.

I don't know how fans who passionately love "Alien" will feel about "Prometheus," which similarly features an android and a crew that doesn't know what it's about to encounter. What I do know is that the perception of perfection can be both satisfying and troubling. Many movies we love we would never want to see changed, remade or insulted. But becoming defensive about the projects we hold close to our hearts speaks to how much we connect with them while preventing the possibility for discussion, if not additions, to their world.

Look at "Blade Runner," a movie also regarded as a classic that has been adjusted and re-released several times since its 1982 opening. Someone watching Scott's director's cut now wouldn't even know that the original version featured a much-scorned voiceover from Deckard (Harrison Ford). People probably wouldn't go for a prequel to that either—some might argue we're living it—but they may have been happy that the filmmaker chose to return to his previous work to account for what he perceived as loose ends.

Do we have to know what efforts led to Ripley (Sigourney Weaver) and Co. winding up in a situation that lent newfound vulnerability to their chest cavities? No. But it's natural and justified to wonder, which is exactly the point of "Prometheus."

IT Certificates at Northwestern

The Business Analyst and IS Project Management certificates from Northwestern University offer working professionals the opportunity to upgrade their IT skill sets through convenient seminar-style courses in the Chicago Loop.

Business Analyst

Business analysts are at the forefront of designing new approaches to software acquisition and systems development. They help companies to develop a better understanding of business process management and to create more sophisticated approaches to organization workflow requirements that result in efficiency and financial savings. Prepare for this fast-paced and rapidly growing career by studying content aligned with the International Institute of Business Analysis (IIBA™). The program is also excellent preparation for Certified Business Analyst Professional™ certification.

IIBA™ Endorsed Education Provider

The Business Analyst program is aligned with the International Institute of Business Analysis (IIBA™) and matches closely the requirements for the Certified Business Analyst Professional™ (CBAP™) certification.

IS Project Management

The Information Systems Project Management program helps bridge information technology with managerial strategy. Upgrade your project management skills and learn to successfully complete IS projects on schedule and within budget. Instruction follows the Project Management Body of Knowledge (PMBOK) approach.

Northwestern also offers project management courses that provide targeted training to enhance project manager performance in preparation to become a Certified Associate in Project Management (CAPM®). See the website for details.

SCS is a registered provider for the Project Management Institute (PMI), the world's foremost advocate for the project management profession.

VH1 draws eyes, but a chorus of nays too

Los Angeles Times

Tami Roman's first experience with reality TV turned out to be an early landmark in the genre. During the second season of MTV's "The Real World," a male cast mate yanked a blanket off a half-naked Roman while she was lying in bed. The scene escalated into rape allegations and resulted in the first expulsion from the show.

Nearly two decades later, Roman returned to reality TV as a star of VH1's "Basketball Wives." While she often appears to be the picture of elegance, she has become known to viewers as a loose cannon. Roman and her costars—the wives, girlfriends and exes of NBA players—regularly engage in fierce battles: wine bottles hurled, hair pulled, faces slapped and even an attempt to use a planter as a weapon.

"Basketball Wives" is just one of several increasingly controversial reality shows that has transformed the once-demure sister channel of MTV into an unlikely venue for provocative programs slanted toward a demographic it previously ignored: African-Americans.

The Viacom-owned cable channel has found ratings gold with shows such as "Basketball Wives," "Love & Hip Hop," and the tamer "La La's Full Court" and "T.I. & Tiny" and hopes to keep building on the foundation that started with "Flavor of Love." That 2006 dating show featured female contestants fighting, spitting and defecating on the floor as they vied for the affections of Flavor Flav. Its newest contender, "Hollywood Exes," features the ex-wives of Eddie Murphy, Prince, R. Kelly, Will Smith and Jose Canseco, premieres this summer.

"They tapped into an audience that is very faithful," said Robin Boylorn, a professor at the University of Alabama who focuses on race studies. "It's smart in terms of marketing and money because in this moment they have the ear of a particular public."

VH1 executives maintain they are evolving the network into a more realistic reflection of the world.

"All of a sudden the network is starting to look like how the world looks," said VH1 President Tom Calderone, who views the network's airing of "Hip Hop Honors" in 2004 as the "watershed" moment in realizing there was an untapped audience. These series are a reflection, he added, of what networks need to do to remain relevant: "We're creating new celebrities. 'Mob Wives' are new celebrities. 'Basketball Wives' are new celebrities."

Focusing on these individuals also makes for a smart strategy.

African-Americans have the highest rate of total TV usage, according to a 2011 Nielsen report—translating to an average of seven hours, 12 minutes each day, two hours above the U.S. average. And black spending power is estimated to reach $1.1 trillion, according to the State of the African-American Consumer Report. While BET, also owned by Viacom, is still dominant among black viewers, that network abandoned celebrity-focused reality programming after it proved polarizing, instead pursuing scripted series.

"We respect our audience, and we don't try to create programming that is dumbed down and appeals to the lowest common denominator," said Loretta Jones, BET's president of original programming.

This year BET has seen its ratings among its key demographic decline as VH1 has made gains with shows such as "Basketball Wives" and "Love & Hip Hop."

The outrageous antics featured on these reality shows have sparked a growing backlash: Viewers created petitions demanding VH1 cancel these shows, advertisers have pulled ads and critics blast the network for promoting crass images of black women. The intense storylines, Calderone said, while in-your-face, "when you peel it all away, it's about struggle."

'The Choice' spins its chairs around

The Philadelphia Inquirer

Miss the days when Fox "reality" shows had a sense of humor?

When animals attacked, aliens were autopsied and women competed like cattle at the county fair to marry strangers they'd been told were millionaires?

Have we got a summer show for you.

It's Fox's "The Choice," a parody of NBC's singing competition "The Voice," that spins those swivel chairs to find not singers, but dates for C-list guys—sorry, "eligible celebrity bachelors"—whose first decisions are made sight unseen.

Most of the overcaffeinated female contestants look as if they could have bounced over from "The Bachelor" mansion, and no one's promising more than a date, so "The Choice" is a low-risk, low-reward proposition.

We've long since stopped losing sleep over the myriad ways young women seem willing to humiliate themselves on TV. But ask yourself: What would you say or do to get someone from MTV's "Jersey Shore" to ask you out?

Paul "DJ Pauly D" DelVecchio is among the quartet of guys featured in Thursday's premiere, and if you love him on MTV,

The Choice

8 p.m. Thursday, Fox

there's no reason you won't adore him on "The Choice." The other chairs are occupied by actor Jason Cook ("General Hospital"), rapper/actor Romeo and champion skier Jeremy Bloom.

Among those spinning the chairs in future episodes: "American Idol" Season 5 winner Taylor Hicks; another "Jersey Shore" guy, Mike "The Situation" Sorrentino; and singer Joe Jonas.

Host Cat Deeley is dancing as fast as she can, but she can't disguise the weakness that plagues both "The Choice" and its more talent-focused inspiration. Once the chairs are turned, looks become a deciding factor (in this case, the deciding factor), and you won't need anything as complicated as a scorecard to predict the guys' picks.

Which doesn't mean you don't have choices yourself.

RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

HEALTHY MEN AND WOMEN 18-55 YEARS OLD FALL ALLERGY SYMPTOMS

DO YOU HAVE HAY FEVER IN THE FALL?

Researchers at the University of Chicago are conducting a research study to see whether an experimental nasal spray (not approved by the FDA) is safe and can reduce the signs and symptoms of allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

If you have a history of allergy symptoms only in the fall, but do not currently have any symptoms, and are skin test positive to ragweed you may be eligible to participate in this study. A screening visit, lasting about 2 hours, will take place at the Nasal Physiology Laboratory at the University of Chicago and then two additional study visits will be conducted.

If you are interested, please call 773-702-5889 for more information.

You will receive compensation for your time required to complete the study visits.

Young adult novels for summer

Fantasy, mystery, romance—this summer the sky's the limit for young adult books. Here's a peek at some of the titles out in June and July. LOS ANGELES TIMES

JUNE

Between the Lines

By Jodi Picoult & Samantha van Leer

What goes on inside a book when it's closed? A teen girl finds out from a fictional hero in a novel she loves in this young adult romance by bestselling author Picoult and her daughter.

Burn Mark

By Laura Powell

The author takes us to a modern, alternate version of England, where witches are licensed to practice magic—and can be burned at the stake if they abuse their powers.

Flirting in Italian

By Lauren Henderson

A British teen spends her summer in Italy, searching for a girl in a painting who looks like her, as well as having plenty of drama with the cute boys and jealous girls she meets.

For Darkness Shows the Stars

By Diana Peterfreund

In a story that's part Jane Austen, part H.G. Wells, a young man reaches maturity in a world where genetic engineering has nearly destroyed humanity, and the survivors are divided into two groups, the Luddites and the Reduced.

Grim

By Anna Waggoner

While three children mourn the car-accident death of their mother, she is trapped in a limbo state and yearns to be reunited with them.

Keeping the Castle

By Patrice Kindl

An Austen-esque comedy featuring 17-year-old Althea Crawley, who's determined to marry rich Lord Boring so she can restore her family's ramshackle castle.

A Midsummer's Nightmare

By Kody Keplinger

All Whitley wants is to hang out at the beach with her divorced father—and then she meets Dad's new fiancee and her soon-to-be step-brother whom she already knows (intimately). A midsummer's nightmare indeed.

Monument 14

By Emmy Laybourne

An environmental disaster in the near future causes a group of students to seek safety in a superstore—and cope with their differences as they build a new social order together.

This Is Not a Test

By Courtney Summers

Six teens are forced to cooperate as they hide in their high school while zombie mobs are lurking outside.

Violins of Autumn

By Amy McAuley

The year is 1944. Meet Betty, a 17-year-old spy who has parachuted into Nazi-occupied France to help the Resistance and avoid the sinister, watchful eyes of the Gestapo.

JULY

Small Damages

By Beth Kephart

When they discover their teen daughter is pregnant, Kenzie's parents send her to Spain to give birth and give up the baby for adoption—until the lovely, disorienting atmosphere of a strange world forces her to open her eyes.

Lies, Knives, and Girls in Red Dresses

By Ron Koertge
Illustrated by Andrea Dezso

A dark retelling of classic fairy tales—including Little Red Riding Hood and Rumpelstiltskin—in free verse with a dash of gore and horror that updates the stories for a young adult crowd.

'Halo 4'

Sneak peek: Evolving universe of 'Halo 4'

CNN

Born from a new developer and bolstered by Microsoft's new SmartGlass technology, "Halo 4" is getting ready for its closeup.

The next installment of the popular sci-fi action franchise looks to be another epic story in the saga of Master Chief and the "Halo" universe, while introducing a new enemy ready to challenge the Chief for domination.

"Halo 4" is being created by a new developer, 343 Industries, taking over from Bungie. It will take place five years after the conclusion of "Halo 3." The universe is at peace, but a nemesis rises to ruin the calm and sets Master Chief, the series' iconic protagonist, on a hero's journey.

At a Microsoft demonstration Tuesday night at the Electronic Entertainment Expo in L.A., 343 Industries general manager Bonnie Ross said it was an honor to take over the franchise.

"The 'Halo' universe is one of our most important characters," she said. "That's what I'm passionate about. We put together a bible of the 'Halo' universe so we could look at the [direction of the] franchise for the next 10 years."

From video games to books, Ross described the "Halo" franchise as a rich creative vein from which to tell many stories.

The new story also will reveal more about the relationship between Master Chief and his artificial intelligence companion, Cortana. While the Chief will grow as a character, everything in the story had to be kept within the framework of the game, said Frank O'Connor, franchise development director for 343i.

"There are things that will completely turn people on their heads," he said.

A new multiplayer mode also will offer its own storyline, much like a television series, 343i execs said. It will feature weekly episodes, set up by short videos describing events preceding your team's current missions. While the missions can be done by one player, they are designed to bring friends together to do battle for a week.

"It is like a TV show you can play," O'Connor said. "I'm really hoping for water cooler moments where people gather to talk about—not what they watched on TV—but what they did in the game, like plummeting to their doom."

During Tuesday's demonstration, the game play looked and felt similar to what "Halo" previously has offered, with a wide variety of weapons, grenades and abilities. Ross said there are some game play changes, but he wants players to discover them for themselves. On first glance, the new game's environments looked rich and beautiful.

Ross and O'Connor said "Halo 4" would utilize Microsoft's new SmartGlass app, which lets gamers use a "second screen" tablet or phone to augment their game play, for a richer experience.

"Halo 4" is due out Nov. 6, exclusively on Xbox 360.

Guess we weren't the only ones who couldn't resist Liam Hemsworth as Gale in "The Hunger Games." The 22-year-old sassy Aussie proposed to girlfriend Miley Cyrus, 19, last week, conline.com reported Wednesday—and she's got the massive rock to prove it. But it hasn't always been shiny, happy fun times for the couple. We took a walk down their aisle of romance (ew, sorry) to see how these lovebirds made it this far. ## BRIDAL PARTY IN THE U.S.A.

True love doesn't wait—
Liam and Miley are getting hitched

GETTY IMAGES FILE

AUGUST 2009

The two met on the set of their movie, "The Last Song," but more than just their characters found summer lovin'. They were spotted smooching all over the place after filming wrapped.

The tweet: "I kinda want to go see 'The Time Traveler's Wife' but I think I'll just sit around and eat sushi and watch 'Liar Liar' with Liam :)" —@miley Cyrus

OCTOBER 2009

Miley quits Twitter on her boo's recommendation, saying: "FYI Liam doesn't have a Twitter and he wants ME to delete mine with good reason."

At the time she was one of the social network's most-followed celebs.

AUGUST 2010

Heartbreak hotel! Liam's rep confirms the two have split, after months of fending off rumors on the subject.

SEPTEMBER 2010

Or not so much! The lovelahs were spotted together at Panera AND Starbucks. Nothing says true romance like chain restaurants.

NOVEMBER 2010

Or... yes broken up! While her parents went through a divorce, Miley and Liam went their separate ways again.

APRIL 2011

She's baaaack: "I'm not gonna lie. I came back to twitter for 2 reasons. My fans and to follow @charlie sheen #winning." Miley tweeted, of her return to social networking. Great reasoning, girl.

JUNE 2011

This relationship is ready to go the distance. Liam took a break from "Hunger Games" filming to visit Miley in his native Australia. There probably was no trip to Cracker Barrel.

MARCH 2012

Forget breakup rumors—bring on the engagement whispers! Miley had heads turning with a teensy diamond sparkler on her ring finger. The couple, of course, denied everything.

The quote: "She makes me really happy. When you start, you want to be professional, but when you're filming those scenes with someone and pretending to love them, you're not human if you don't feel something." —Liam, on falling in love with Miley when he was 19 and she was 16

MAY 2012

The quote: "Sex is actually really beautiful... It's ignorant not to talk to your kids about it or [not] make it seem as magical or cool as it actually is."

—Miley, to Lifetime TV

JUNE 2012

Surprise! Rumors became reality when the "Hunger Games" hunk presented the former Hannah Montana with a 3.5 carat gem. We knew that first one was too small to be true.

Jackson's 'Truth'

Like her brother Michael, Janet Jackson has tried her hand not only at music, but also movies. Next up: executive producing Brainchild Films' transgender documentary "Truth," the New York-based studio announced. "We want to stop the hate and find understanding," she said, according to Rolling Stone.

Dear Mr. President ...

—John Mayer, to Rolling Stone, commenting on Taylor Swift's song "Dear John." Mayer continued: "I was really caught off-guard, and it really humiliated me at a time when I'd already been dressed down." Swift has not confirmed that the song is about Mayer.

All you need is patience

Good news, America: French police on Wednesday recovered $200,000 in jewelry stolen from Axl Rose, nme.com reports. The necklaces and jewels were swiped during a private show in Paris. Somewhere, Slash is shrugging with indifference.

THE DIGIT

950,000

That's how many copies People sold of the Jessica Simpson baby announcement edition. That's well under the 1.3 million average for the celeb mag. Ouch, baby!
